WUSD employee accused of embezzlement

The Yolo County District Attorney's office has filed charges against an employee of Washington Unified School District for felony embezzlement.

The charges, filed last week, do not contain detailed information. They identify the defendant as Mary Elizabeth Colby. The complaint alleges that Colby misappropriated public money and falsified records on or around July 1, 2012.

A school district attorney reported the crime to local police earlier this year. A police lieutenant told the News-Ledger that the loss estimated at $16,000.

Colby could not be immediately reached for comment, and further information was not available.

No arrest has been made.

Man posed as cop, helped girlfriend rob her 'johns'

A West Sacramento man and his girlfriend are facing prison for a pair of robberies in which the woman solicited prostitution from the victims, and the man showed up to rob them.

According to the office of Yolo County District Attorney Jeff Reisig, the robberies took place in the summer of 2012. Alicia Ortega offered her services as a prostitute to the victims, and her boyfriend Roberto Montalvo "would then arrive and flash a badge and represent himself as a police officer."

The pair would then take the victims' money.

Ortega pled to one count of robbery in exchange for a ten-year sentence.

Montalvo, 53, was convicted on Aug. 15 by a jury, which found him guilty on robbery and drug charges as well as "impersonating a police officer." He had prior convictions for aggravated kidnapping and aggravated robbery from the state of Illinois.

Montalvo will be sentenced by Judge David Reed on Sept. 17. He faces up to a life sentence in state prison.

Raley's chain settles claim over hazardous material disposal

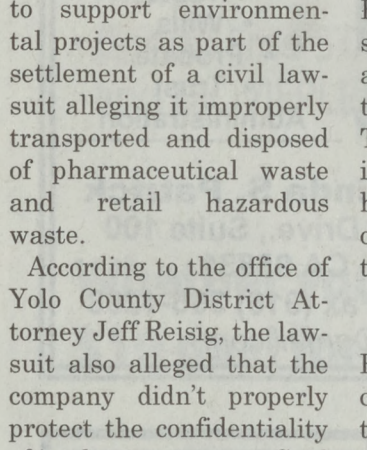
The West Sacramento-based Raley's supermarket chain has agreed to pay about $1.6 million in civil penalties, costs and to support environmental projects as part of the settlement of a civil lawsuit alleging it improperly transported and disposed of pharmaceutical waste and retail hazardous waste.

According to the office of Yolo County District Attorney Jeff Reisig, the lawsuit also alleged that the company didn't properly protect the confidentiality of its drug customers. Said Reisig in a press release:

"Raley's has been a valued merchant in Yolo County for many years. Raley's has cooperated with the prosecution team throughout the investigation into their unlawful practices."

The Yolo district attorney's office was one of 26 such offices to join in the lawsuit, filed in San Joaquin County. The lawsuit alleged that more than 130 Raley's stores improperly sent pharmaceutical waste and other hazardous waste to trash bins and landfills. The settlement agreement includes new controls on how the company disposes of such things in the future.

As part of the settlement, Raley's has agreed to purchase five mobile freshwater purification systems to be used to provide safe drinking water to California communities in an emergency or in times of need. The systems will be housed in Placer, El Dorado, Sonoma, Sacramento and Contra Costa Counties, but will be available for use in other counties.



Fresh produce

Raley's supermarket chain announced it raised over $175,000 in donations this summer in a drive to put more fresh fruits and vegetables into local food banks. The customer donations, added to other campaigns, bring the total raised for "Food for Families" since June to $450,000.

Summer hiking safety in the local wilderness

Commentary by Bob Schneider
Tuleyome Organization

In August, in extreme heat, there were at least two rescues of hiking groups in our region.

Thank you to our emergency personnel. But, let's be perfectly clear. These rescues should never have been need. Rescues that can be avoided put people unnecessarily at risk. They can be expensive and they take vital emergency personnel and resources away from our communities where they may be needed.

Check the weather. Don't hike on high temperature days. Take LOTS of water. Be pre-pared to turn around when temps increase and water runs low.

One way to learn about the hikes in our region and to learn about hiking is to first go with others. Tuleyome, the Sierra Club, and many "Meet Up" groups offer hikes.

Summit Springs Trail

Top Ten Safety Pointers:

1. Know where you are going – and let others know. There are maps online and trail books at outdoor stores. Plan your trip and let your family and friends know your plan. I sug-gest that new hikers first take trips with hiking groups in the region.
2. A whistle? Signal mirror? Cell Phone? It's nice to be able to call for help when really necessary but keep in mind that often trails can be well out of cell phone range. Before you make that "rescue me" call, ask yourself: Is somebody injured? Is this a life-threatening emergency? Do I really need help or can I figure this out for myself?
3. Take a hat, dark glasses and sunscreen with you – and use them.
4. It is good to have some basic First Aid supplies. Super glue and duct tape are invaluable but you can also purchase small First Aid kits at outdoor stores.
5. Keep up your energy level. A sandwich, nuts, dried fruit and energy bars can give a quick boost and make for a happier hiking experience.
6. Mountain lions: attacks are extremely rare but it's wise to be particularly aware if you're walking with pets or children at dawn or dusk. I have not seen a mountain lion in our re-gion (yet) but I vividly recall seeing footprints on two frost-covered steps at Cold Can-yon. It was exciting and just a bit scary! And, yes, there are also rattlesnakes out there. They don't always rattle and will generally avoid us unless startled, provoked or stepped on. Personally, I do not recommend getting closer for a photo.
7. Starting your hike late and getting "be-nighted" is not a reason for rescue! Flashlights or headlamps can allow you to hike during those unplanned nights out.
8. Take lots of water; at least two quarts for a day hike. I use a water bladder and hose for sipping. Whenever I think of water or thirst I always take a sip to stay hydrated.
9. Weather can change dramatically on the trail so be prepared for everything.
10. Lastly, stay on the trails. Trails are built through careful planning and with the landscape in mind. Cutting switchbacks causes erosion and habitat destruction. Someone has to pay to repair the damage from inconsiderate hikers.

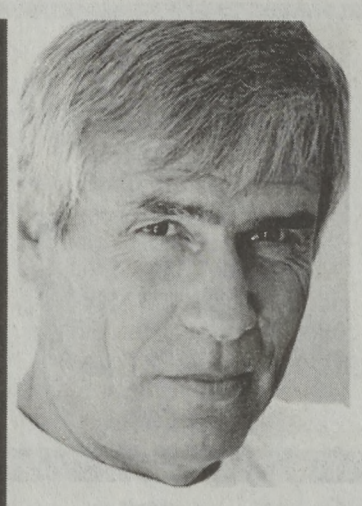
Think twice before booking that flight to Italy

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Note: A friend of mine is leaving in a few weeks for a much-anticipated summer vacation to Europe, with the main destination being Italy, and I'm reminded of the following column, written a few years back when I, too, thought all travel roads should lead to Rome.

I've been thinking lately that it's finally time for me to take myself a European vacation, something I've always wanted to do, although for some reason it has never seemed to get beyond the planning stages. I have talked to lots of people who have already been there, and they all seem to think that Paris should be my first destination. I'm afraid all I really know about the "City of Light" is that Napoleon Bonaparte once called it home and that Humphrey Bogart and Ingrid Bergman fell in love there before they ended up in Casablanca. I've also been told that I will love England and all its historical sites, although London is apparently very expensive if you stay more than a few days. Scandinavia is also supposed to be a gorgeous part of Europe, and since I've read so many books on the history of the two World Wars that were fought in the past century, I also want to spend some time in Germany. Spain has always interested me, too, but most of all, I want to see Italy.

The art buff in me wants to see some of the major works of Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci and Raphael, and Italy is where you can find them. And like most everyone else, I've always wanted to see the Colosseum in Rome and stroll through that city's many piazzas and museums. Then off I would go to Venice to take a gondola ride down the Grand Canal to St. Mark's Square. Next would be Florence, the birthplace of the Renaissance, with all its gorgeous architecture and fabulous works of art by all the great Masters. And I would even throw in scenic Tuscany and the beautiful Lake Country if I could find the time.

So, having decided that it was finally time to leave West Sacramento in the dust and get on one of those many roads that lead to Rome, I thought it might be a good idea to first pick the brain of someone who has actually lived in Italy. I will call her Dotty and she was actually born in England. She married an Italian, however, and was soon on her way to the biggest adventure of her life.

"Well," said Dotty when I eagerly asked her to tell me everything she possibly could about Italy, "the first thing you want to do is avoid being there from May through September, when it is ridiculously hot and humid and there are millions of tourists everywhere you look. Secondly, be prepared for more graffiti than you've ever seen in your life, especially in the big cities, where it's everywhere. Next, just accept the fact that if you speak English or even speak fluent Italian with any kind of foreign accent, the taxi cab drivers and shop owners are going to charge you at least twice what they do the natives. Oh, and don't ever count on a bus or any other form of public transportation being on time. Time as you and I understand it simply does not exist in Italy. But at least you are a man, and that should help."

"What do you mean by that?" I asked with interest.

"Well," explained Dotty, "you have to understand that Italy is a man's country. Women are supposed to get married, stay at home with the children, shop daily for fresh food and then cook wonderful meals with it, and most important of all, cause their men no trouble or grief. You have to understand, most Italian men live at home forever and are very attached to their mother, so when they finally do get married, they expect their wife to treat them the same way their mother always has. Plus women are also not supposed to be out in the work force taking jobs away from the men, most of whom get their jobs through nepotism by the way."

"Nepotism?"

"Oh yes, the whole country is based on nepotism, and even then, most of the jobs aren't real jobs."

"How so?"

"Well, in Italy, especially in any kind of government work, 50 relatives will be hired to do the work of 20 men. Plus the lunch hour goes on forever and offices close early, so if you are used to efficiency and good service, Italy will be a shock to you. But the biggest shock you will find in Italy, if you are a woman anyway, is the sexism, and I guess that really shouldn't be such a shock considering the fact that Italians keep re-electing a scumbag like Berlusconi to be their prime minister. His whole career revolves around sexism and his sex scandals would make your President Clinton look like a choir boy."

Suddenly sensing that her less-than-glowing critique of Italy was starting to put a damper on my European vacation plans, Dotty added, "Don't get me wrong, Daryl. Italy has many good points, including the marvelous architecture, all that wonderful history, and some of the best food and wine in all of Europe. All I'm saying is that if you stay longer than a short vacation, I'm afraid Italy is a country that can disappoint you in many ways. It certainly disappointed me."

"Well," I said, trying to be cute, "at least you married yourself one of those famous Italian lovers."

"Please, let's not talk about my biggest disappointment of all!"

The art buff in me wants to see some of the major works of Michelangelo, Leonardo da Vinci and Raphael, and Italy is where you can find them. And like most everyone else, I've always wanted to see the Colosseum in Rome and stroll through that city's many piazzas and museums.

Cyclocross -- a race involving mud and bicycles -- coming to the local riverfront

Beginning racers welcome; food and beer will be for sale

West Sacramento's Jack Hargrove, 13, trains for next month's cyclocross event near the ziggurat. Cyclocross bikes are related to road racing bikes but with bigger tires and other adaptations. Competitors must often carry their bikes over obstacles and impassable terrain on a cyclocross course. (Photo courtesy of Jeff Namba.)

The sport of "cyclocross" is coming to the West Sacramento riverfront on Sept 6.

Local man Matthew Hargrove joined with the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce in announcing that bicycle racers of all levels are invited to sign up for the action, which begins at 10:15 a.m. at 651 Second Street, along the Riverwalk Park.

Cyclocross "is a form of bicycle racing where competitors race laps around a course featuring grass, dirt, mud, gravel, sand and obstacles." Winners are determined by elapsed time.

The inaugural West Sacramento Cyclocross Grand Prix will take place on a closed course between the I Street and Tower bridges. Over 250 competitors are expected, and will give out cash and prizes for winners. There will be beginner's races and "professional/expert" races.

Admission is free to spectators. There will be a pair of local bands, "Pets" and "Sneeze Attack!," performing throughout the day, as well as food and drinks for sale from Bike Dog Brewery, DogTown and California Love Truck.

Sponsors include Cedaron.

JOKES OF THE WEEK:

Chuck Norris jokes, which riff on the martial arts star's invincibility, may be old. But they're still funny. Here are a few for your amusement:

-- There used to be a street called "Chuck Norris Avenue." But they had to change the name, because no one crosses "Chuck Norris" and lives.
-- Chuck Norris has a grizzly bear rug in his living room. It's not dead -- it's just afraid to move.
-- When Alexander Bell invented the telephone, he had three missed calls from Chuck Norris.
-- Chuck Norris doesn't wear a watch. He decides what time it is.
-- Chuck Norris uses a stunt double- -- for crying scenes.
-- Chuck Norris CAN believe it's not butter.
-- Chuck Norris can watch '60 Minutes' in only 25.
-- If you have five dollars and Chuck Norris has five dollars, Chuck Norris still has more than you.
-- Chuck Norris doesn't climb trees, he just pulls them down and walks on top of them.
-- Superman and Chuck Norris once held a wrestling match on a bet: the loser had to wear his underpants on the outside.

COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEWS
BY SAM STRUCKHOFF

PICKS OF THE WEEK

"Words and Pictures" (PG-13) -- In an leafy and enchanting New England prep school, teacher Jack Marcus (Clive Owen) acts as a bit of a renegade academic, daring his students to truly experience literature. See, he's a washed-up author who's become quite a drinker and an even bigger windbag. Enter the new art teacher, Dina (Juliette Binoche), a tight-lipped fine-art painter who left the big city. Jack and Dina have lots of pseudo-intellectual banter before falling in love.

The movie's ongoing debate over the superior artistic medium -- words or pictures -- seems more than a little forced. We're watching a movie, so clearly both are just as important, right? For a movie about a witty romance between smart people, it sure takes the slow and obvious route.

"Brick Mansions" (PG-13) -- A brutal crime lord has acquired a weapon of mass destruction, and it's up to two hardcore dudes to shut it down with as many awesome stunts as possible. Paul Walker, in his last complete film, stars as a narcotics detective in a near-future version of Detroit. He's paired with Lino (David Belle), an acrobatic ex-con who's dedicated to getting gangs and drugs out of his neighborhood.

Clive Owen, Juliette Binoche in "Words and Pictures"

The action is downright impressive: Belle is a legend in the world of Parkour, the sport of moving rapidly over obstacles using only momentum. Without wires or computer assistance, this guy leaps across rooftops and bounces around faster than Daffy Duck. Though it's no fault of Walker's, this movie doesn't stack up to its source, a 2004 French flick called "District B-13."

"The Hornet's Nest" (R) -- Real footage from the front lines shows the chaos of war in this documentary made by directors David Salzburg and Christian Turead, using video from journalist Mike Boettcher. In a mountainous region of Afghanistan, along the Pakistani border, the 101st Airborne descends into the Kunar valley to fight Taliban forces running the area. It was predicted to be a day-long mission, but it turned into nine days of fighting. This documentary doesn't go into causes or impacts of the war, but focuses on the astounding experiences of the troops in the thick of it.

"Palo Alto" (R) -- Dreamy and disaffected teenagers in a nice California suburb emote all of the angst, longing and confusion in this film about wasted youth. April (Emma Roberts) is a high-school girl who is occasionally teased as the class virgin, and frequently teased for being the favorite of her super-cute soccer coach, Mr. B (James Franco). Teddy (Jack Kilmer) is interested in April, but he keeps getting caught in the bad decisions of his best friend, Fred -- a human vortex of disturbing teen recklessness. First-time director Gia Coppola (yes, related) adapted the movie from a series of short stories by Franco.

"Overwhelmed: Work, Love, and Play When No One Has the Time"
by Brigid Schulte
(Farrar, Straus and Giroux, $26)
Reviewed by Molly Ford

Are you on a treadmill of "to-do's" that never come off your list? So is everyone else, and Brigid Schulte wants to figure out why.

Her new book, "Overwhelmed: Work, Love, and Play When No One Has the Time," is a must-read for those of us who struggle with managing our own time, yet cannot pinpoint how to begin to correct the problem, or how our time struggle even began in the first place. The book examines, in-depth, why so many of us are having trouble with managing time -- including what societal factors or personal habits are limiting our success.

Weaving a story of feeling overwhelmed across different facets of modern day life -- work, love and play -- Schulte focuses on the ideas of "time confetti" and "time serenity" as a way to explain the problem of feeling like there are never enough hours in the day to get things done.

The book is a mix of research notes, studies, public politics/political motives, interviews, anecdotes and the author's own first-person account of how this country has become overwhelmed. The book points out traps that we all fall into and provides some real-life examples of how to cope with or avoid the traps.

A favorite section of the book is the appendix, which lists dozens of tips and key points explored in the book, perfect for easy reference or a refresher on Schulte's work after reading. (Favorite tip: "Chunk your time ... Work in concentrated blocks with regular breaks, and fit in the 5 percent stuff-of-life ... after you've made time for what's important.")

If you want to figure out why you are feeling so overwhelmed in your daily life, and how to fix it, this is your read.

The Kitchen Diva BY Angela Shelf Medearis

Stone Fruit Feast

When it comes to food and cooking, a good rule of thumb is to mix it up a bit. When cooking seasonally, it's best to try new foods when they show up at the farmers market or grocery. There's so much fresh summer produce to choose from -- from the popular picks like corn and watermelon, to the lesser known, not so sought after group like mulberries and crenshaw squash. Now is the time to take advantage of this overflowing in-the-raw produce buffet. Try something new and experience the nuances of different flavors in your meals!

In a world longing for peaches, nectarines somehow take a back seat. Nectarines and peaches are both members of the stone-fruit family, which includes plums and apricots. But in this family, the peach and nectarine are so close, there is only one gene responsible for their difference. This unique gene makes the peach fuzzy and the nectarine smooth. If you take a blind taste test, I think you'll agree that the nectarine has its own distinct attraction. It's usually sweeter and juicier than most peaches -- in essence, more nectar!

Nectarines, like peaches, originated in China over 2,000 years ago and spread across the continents until they landed in America. Nectarines, like other stone fruits, are ripe when they give just slightly to the touch. You also should be able to smell the sweetness of a nectarine. They can sit out until fully ripe, then they should be eaten or refrigerated quickly. The ultimate is to buy ripe nectarines and enjoy them right away.

Former White House chef Bill Yosse has created the perfect recipe to showcase the unique flavors of nectarines. His Flaky Nectarine Pie is an addictive dessert featuring summer stone fruit encased in a delicate crust.

FLAKY NECTARINE PIE

2 packages pre-made pie dough (for 2 pie crusts) or homemade pie dough for 2 pie crusts

Filling

8 cups (about 7) ripe nectarines, unpeeled, pitted and cut into 1-inch chunks
1 tablespoon freshly squeezed lemon juice
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1/4 cup packed light brown sugar
1/8 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon brandy
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 egg white, beaten, at room temperature
1 1/2 teaspoon granulated sugar

For the Filling

1. In a large bowl, toss together the nectarines and lemon juice. Add sugars and the salt; gently mix to combine without mashing the nectarine chunks. Set aside to macerate for about 30 minutes.

2. Return nectarines to the bowl and add cornstarch, mixing until it has completely dissolved. Stir in the brandy and vanilla. Reserve.

To Assemble and Bake

1. Transfer one round of the pie crust dough to a black steel or Pyrex 9-inch pie pan, and trim the edges so they are even with the rim. Place the second round on a flat baking sheet and place in freezer. This will become the top of the pie.

2. Freeze dough in pie pan for 1 hour. When ready to bake, preheat oven to 425 F. Remove pie pan from freezer and line the dough with aluminum foil. Fill with baking beads, dried beans or uncooked rice. Bake for 30 minutes; allow to cool. When cool, preheat oven again to 350 F.

3 . Pour nectarine filling into the pre-baked pie shell. Use a pastry brush to moisten the edges of the bottom pie crust with some of the egg white. Remove the top dough from freezer and place over the fruit. Press down around edges with fingers to seal, and tuck any excess dough under the edges. With paring knife, cut 12 slits in the center of raw dough, barely piercing it, to create air vents. Then, brush top dough with remaining egg white and sprinkle with Demerara or granulated sugar.

4 . Bake on an aluminum foil-covered rimmed 11-by-17-inch baking sheet on the center rack for 1 hour until pie is deeply golden, and you can see the thick juices bubbling through the vents. Let cool before serving. Makes one 9-inch pie to serve 8.

OPINION

NEWS-LEDGER EDITORIAL:

The meters should be running

In this time of drought, most West Sacramento residents have water meters that are going unused.

It's like this:

Homes built since 1992 have come with water meters attached. Older homes didn't. The City of West Sacramento is chipping away at this deficit by installing water meters neighborhood by neighborhood, until some point several years from now when every home has a water meter.

It's too expensive, officials believe, to finish this retrofit job all at once.

So as it stands (and you can see recent issues of the News-Ledger for more information) about two-thirds of West Sacramento's homes now have water meters. In theory, these 8,400 residential customers could be billed according to how much water they use. Instead of paying a flat rate, no matter how much they use their taps, they could be billed "volumetrically."

But even though 8,400 West Sacramento's homes have meters, meters are only being used to bill about 11 percent of those homes. The rest are still paying a flat rate. This is because metered billing is still voluntary in this city. Even if you have a meter installed, you will keep paying a flat water rate unless you opt into metered billing. You have to call and ask the city to switch.

If you don't make that call, you'll pay the same flat rate for your water service regardless of whether you are a water hero or a water hog.

With metered billing, the city can set a base rate for modest users of water and charge them a little less. It could then charge heavy water users extra, encouraging them to scale back. Billing by meters, quite simply, will result in water conservation. When people have to pay for what they use, they use less.

Why don't West Sacramento officials work harder to transition everyone with a water meter into the metered billing system?

Because they want to keep things simple. They don't want some water customers billed on a flat rate because they don't have meters yet, while others are forced into a metered rate. So the city plan is to wait several years until everyone has a water meter, and then switch everybody at once.

West Sacramento has made a choice between a simple plan and a plan that maximizing water savings. Water saving took second place. Since there's no guarantee when this drought will come to an end, that's not a very wise or very progressive local policy.

A better option would be to keep installing meters, and to give every metered home a grace period before it's switched to metered billing. That would be in keeping with the spirit of State Water Code Section 527.

The total amount of the unpaid balance of the obligation secured by the property to be sold and reasonable estimated costs, expenses and advances at the time of the initial publication of the Notice of Sale is: $158,911.49. If the Trustee is unable to convey title for any reason, the successful bidder's sole and exclusive remedy shall be the return of monies paid to the Trustee, and the successful bidder shall have no further recourse. The beneficiary under said Deed of Trust heretofore executed and delivered to the undersigned a written declaration of Default and Demand for Sale, and a written Notice of Default and Election to Sell. The undersigned caused said Notice of Default and Election to Sell to be recorded in the county where the real property is located. NOTICE TO POTENTIAL BIDDERS: If you are considering bidding on this property lien, you should understand that there are risks involved in bidding at a trustee auction. You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call (800)280-2832 or visit the Internet Web Site, www.auction.com, using the file number assigned to this case 1385601-31. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web Site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. FOR SALES INFORMATION: (800)280-2832 Cal-Western Reconveyance LLC, 525 East Main Street, P.O. Box 22004, El Cajon, CA 92022-9004 Dated: August 05, 2014. (DLPP-439291 08/13/14, 08/20/14, 08/27/14)
